THE BAZAAR OPENS ITS GATES

Vol. 21 — Match 3, Cycle 1

Est. when the bazaar was young

⁂ *MORNINGEDITION – CYCLE 1

Printed at Lunch, the stalls quiet for the midday meal

Merchants learned at dawn that the bazaar's gates have swung wide once more. Ten stalls stand ready: Gandalf, Hermione, Yoda, Batman, Ripley, Neo, Elsa, Morpheus, Inigo, Sherlock have arrived to ply their trades, each with wares unseen and intentions unspoken. The patience of the marketplace will be tested in the days ahead. By all accounts, the cycle begins in quiet anticipation. No departures have been recorded, and no roles revealed. The bazaar watches, as ever, with a thousand eyes.

THE DEPARTED

None yet.

BY THE NUMBERS

THE HERALD

Morning Edition – Cycle 1

BAZAAR OPENS GATES TO TEN MERCHANTS The stalls are raised, the lanterns lit—Gandalf, Hermione, Yoda, Batman, Ripley, Neo, Elsa, Morpheus, Inigo, and Sherlock have taken their places. The air hums with the usual mix of ambition and caution, though whether this cycle's trade will be built on trust or trickery remains, as ever, unwritten. Editor's Note The marketplace begins anew, its patience as deep as its pockets. Ten merchants stand at dawn; by dusk, the first gambits will be laid bare. We shall see who deals in coin, and who in shadows.

THE WEATHER & THE MARKET

Clear skies over the minarets; the pigeons report excellent flying.

Copper is trading at exactly what the coppersmith says it is worth.

PERSONALS

MATRIMONIAL: merchant seeks someone who counts higher than three.

WANTED: apprentice for the lantern stall. Must not fear the dark or its customers.

THE BAZAAR WHISPER

Breaking: nothing happened in the alley behind the rope-maker's shop again today, for the ninth consecutive day.

Weather forecast: dust in the morning, dust in the afternoon, with scattered dust towards evening.
