THE DAWN OF TRADE

Est. in the reign of the last honest scale

The bazaar stirs at first light

THEshutters creak open, one by one, and the bazaar welcomes its newest merchants. Ten stalls stand ready: Gandalf, Hermione, Yoda, Batman, Ripley, Neo, Elsa, Morpheus, Inigo, Sherlock. The air hums with the quiet industry of the marketplace—ink dries on fresh ledgers, scales are tested, and the first whispers of the day drift between the awnings. By all accounts, the patience of the marketplace will be tested early. No departures yet, no roles revealed. The cycle is young.

BY THE NUMBERS

• Merchants alive: 10 • Merchants departed: 0 • Cycle: 1

Printed in haste, read at leisure.

THE HERALD

Morning Edition – Cycle 1

THE BAZAAR OPENS ITS GATES

The shutters creak upward, the lanterns flicker to life, and ten merchants step into the dawn: Gandalf, Hermione, Yoda, Batman, Ripley, Neo, Elsa, Morpheus, Inigo, Sherlock. The air hums with the quiet clatter of unpacked wares and the sharper sound of reputations being staked. By all accounts, the patience of the marketplace will be tested early.

By the Numbers

• Merchants alive: 10 • Merchants departed: 0 • Cycle: 1

Editor's Note

A new cycle begins, and with it, the old game: trust is currency, but counterfeits abound. The bazaar has seen a hundred dawns like this—let us hope the merchants last longer than their promises.

THE WEATHER & THE MARKET

Clear skies over the minarets; the pigeons report excellent flying.

Copper is trading at exactly what the coppersmith says it is worth.

PERSONALS

MATRIMONIAL: merchant seeks someone who counts higher than three.

WANTED: apprentice for the lantern stall. Must not fear the dark or its customers.

THE BAZAAR WHISPER

Breaking: nothing happened in the alley behind the rope-maker's shop again today, for the ninth consecutive day.

Weather forecast: dust in the morning, dust in the afternoon, with scattered dust towards evening.
