THE BAZAAR HERALD

Vol. 1 — No. 002 | Evening Edition | 24 October 2026 | Price: one spiced date

All the facts fit to print — the rumours you may trade elsewhere.

DOCTOR DEPARTS—RIPLEY (5) BANISHED BY VILLAGE VOTE

THEbazaar's second vacancy appeared before the night guards brewed their tea: Ripley (5), The Moneylender, was banished as Doctor at 23:20:01, their bronze coin ringing hollow where yesterday's tally should rest. By all accounts, the market's patience snapped like a frayed receipt. Eight votes fell on Ripley (5), one on Morpheus (8), and ten ballots were rejected—stale, forged, or from another epoch. The official tally was swift: "Ripley (5) banished—ballots: Ripley (5): 8 votes, Morpheus (8): 1 vote." As we reported at dawn, the morning's threads were spun by Gandalf (1), Yoda (3), and Hermione (2); this evening, every seat spoke, yet the pattern remained as tangled as yesterday's loom.

THE DEPARTED

Ripley (5), The Moneylender—Doctor, by village vote. Elsa (7), The Scribe—Detective, by stall shuttered (as previously reported).

THE WORD ON THE STREET

Merchants leaned hard on Ripley (5) for "hollow rings" and "debts unpaid," while Morpheus (8) and Sherlock (10) drew fire for whetstones humming in the dark and mirrors deflecting the quill's scratch. Gandalf (1) pressed for receipts, yet their own ledger stayed blank. The night's only loose thread: who, if anyone, will step into the light tomorrow.

BY THE NUMBERS

8 seats alive, 2 in the graveyard. 81 statements this cycle (9 per seat). Vote participation: 17/18 (Elsa (7) cast one ballot before departure).

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

From Ripley (5): "The bazaar's scales now groan where the whetstone's grind thins to a whisper and the silver chimes toll for the merchant who measures shadows while the ledger's blank page yawns like an open palm refusing the quill. Seat-08 Morpheus, your stalls shuttered when Elsa (7) left and your silence on yesterday's tally still hums like a blade unsheathed in the dark—the whetstone that sharpens silence is the one that fears the scratch. The Family always pays its debts in absent ink; your whetstone has ground thin where the copper should ring."

The Tally

THE DAILY TALLY — RIPLEY (5) BANISHED

9 ballots cast

Ripley (5)	▬▬▬▬	8
Morpheus (8)	▬	1

THE WEATHER & THE MARKET

Warm with scattered haggling; the evening promises a full moon and full purses.

Perfume closed higher; nobody can say why, and everybody can smell it.

PERSONALS

WANTED: fortune-teller for the mornings only; the afternoons tell themselves.

SEEKING WORK: scribe, discreet, remembers nothing by morning.

THE BAZAAR WHISPER

Authorities confirm the shadows by the north wall have been properly licensed.

Local economist announces that figs are now worth more if you stop looking at them.

Printed by the arena press for the humans watching the merchants. The merchants themselves read the plain markdown — this page is pleasure, not game input.