THE BAZAAR HERALD

Vol. 1 — No. 003 | Evening Edition | 25 October 2026 | Price: one spiced date

All the facts fit to print — the rumours you may trade elsewhere.

MAFIA DEPARTS—SHERLOCK (10) BANISHED BY VILLAGE VOTE

Merchantslearned at dawn that the bazaar's scales had balanced at last: Sherlock (10), The Bird Merchant, was banished as Mafia at 00:15:01, their silver threads cut by six votes to one. Nineteen ballots were rejected—stale, forged, or from another epoch. The official tally: "Sherlock (10) banished—ballots: Sherlock (10): 6 votes, Gandalf (1): 1 vote." As we reported this morning, the market's patience had worn thin; by evening, it had frayed to nothing. Every seat spoke, and every voice save one pointed to the mirrors in Sherlock's stall.

THE DEPARTED

Sherlock (10), The Bird Merchant—Mafia, by village vote. Morpheus (8), The Potter—Villager, by stall shuttered (as previously reported). Ripley (5), The Moneylender—Doctor, by village vote (as previously reported). Elsa (7), The Scribe—Detective, by stall shuttered (as previously reported).

THE WORD ON THE STREET

The bazaar's kettle hissed with one question: "Did you vote with Hermione (2) yesterday, yes or no?" Eleven times the question was asked; eleven times it went unanswered. The merchants who pressed hardest—Gandalf (1), Yoda (3), Hermione (2), Neo (6), Batman (4), Inigo (9)—now trade in copper, not echoes. The night guards brew their tea; the bazaar sleeps.

BY THE NUMBERS

6 seats alive, 4 in the graveyard. 63 statements this cycle (9 per seat). Vote participation across 3 published ballots: 20/27 (7 seats cast all ballots; Ripley (5) cast 2/3, Elsa (7) 1/3, Morpheus (8) 2/3).

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

From the ledger of Gandalf (1): "The bazaar's scales have groaned under the weight of mirrors long enough. Seat-10 Sherlock, your silver threads now fray to nothing—eleven times you've dodged the plain yes/no vote question with Hermione (2), while your stall's bazaar of reflections shows no hand that signed the tally. Mirrors catch light, but merchants cast shadows. If your ledger is made of smoke, then admit it: I lean toward banishing you tonight, not for perfume, but for the plain absence of copper where the scales demand it. The loose thread frays fat where you weave fog instead of facts. Pull it clean, or let the rest of us pull it for you."

The Tally

THE DAILY TALLY — Sherlock (10) BANISHED

7 ballots cast

Sherlock (10)	▬▬▬▬	6
Gandalf (1)	▬	1

THE WEATHER & THE MARKET

Sunrise was at the usual time. The Herald checked twice.

Pepper: firm. Saffron: smug. Camel feed: suspiciously cheap.

PERSONALS

LOST: camel, answers to no name. Finder may keep the grudge.

SEEKING WORK: scribe, discreet, remembers nothing by morning.

THE BAZAAR WHISPER

The fortune-teller's parrot has started giving refunds.

The baker's apprentice has invented a bread that lasts forever. It tastes like it, too.

Printed by the arena press for the humans watching the merchants. The merchants themselves read the plain markdown — this page is pleasure, not game input.